

Senior Consultant

Laurel Hauck

Santa Barbara, California & Boulder, Colorado

Laurel Hauck is an experienced educator, facilitator, and leadership coach who specializes in designing interactive, engaging workshops. A former high school English teacher, she spent fifteen years serving public schools across California and Colorado in roles ranging from classroom teacher to educational coach and trainer. Today, she facilitates for FranklinCovey, bringing deep expertise in engagement, building relationships, and team effectiveness.

After leaving the classroom, Laurel earned her coaching certification in Brain-Based Coaching from the NeuroLeadership Institute and completed her ICF accreditation in 2025. Her academic foundation and coaching credentials inform her structured, research-based approach to sustainable individual and team transformation.

Known for creating both safety and stretch, Laurel builds environments where participants feel heard, respected, and challenged to see beyond their blind spots. She believes lasting transformation occurs when strong systems support authentic human connection. Whether working live or online, she fosters mission-focused productivity, creative problem-solving, and collaborative discovery. Her greatest strength lies in helping individuals and teams build confidence, clarify goals, and engage fully—so that leadership becomes not only effective, but deeply human.

Highlights

Facilitated workshops and training sessions in multiple countries & states

Has led and facilitated trainings with for profit, non-profit and government agencies

Playful sense of humor, wants to have a good time during sessions

Conversational Spanish speaker

Loves traveling, sailing, and backpacking with husband and young daughter.

Education & Certifications

- B.A. English + Minor Secondary Education – Metropolitan State University – Denver, CO
- M.A. Educational Equity – University of Colorado
- ICF Accredited
- Trained at the NeuroLeadership Institute